Veteran honoured with Ambassador of Peace award

BY SYLVIA COLE
 Review Staff

Maurice St. Onge, 80, of Didsbury and Korean War veteran was honoured two weeks ago with the Ambassador of Peace Award from the Korean Veterans Association in Korea.

"I had no idea I would get the award," said St. Onge, who was told by veteran Doug Whorral to bring his wife to the next special meeting at the Branch 104 Legion in Innisfail, where he is a member. "I'm very glad to get the award this year. It's a beautiful thing and surprised me because I wasn't told about it," he said.

St. Onge was one of four members of the Innisfail Legion to be presented with an award typically handed out when veterans visit Korea. The Korean Veterans Association sponsor Canadian veterans to visit Korea each year. St. Onge, who spent a year and a half in Korea during the war, said he's never wanted to return.

"I have bad memories from my time there so I've always said 'no, I don't want to go,'" said St. Onge of being invited.

Doug Whorral, Korean Veteran representative for Alberta visited Korea in April. He went to the Defence Attaché Office in Seoul and explained he knew three veterans in the Innisfail area that would not be able to come to Korea. Whorral spent the next few months helping to verify the information of St. Onge, Nelson Morrison and Walter Barbash for the Korean government. In September, Whorral received their awards in the mail and was able to present them at the following monthly meeting in Innisfail.

St. Onge was given a medal to wear around his neck and a separate one to hang from his jacket pocket. He also received a tie clip and cufflinks with the Korean Veterans Association design and a letter thanking him for his service during the war.

St. Onge joined the army when he was 19 years old.

He came from a family of ten that farmed and looking for a way to earn his own living, St. Onge was suggested to the army by an employment worker in Manitoba.

After spending a year in Kingston learning Morse code, St. Onge was taken over to Korea in 1951 where he would spend a year and a half fighting in the Korean War.

While St. Onge tries not to remember his time in Korea, he does place an importance on remembering the past and honouring those who fought.

"When I came back and talked to people, they didn't know what the Korean War was. It was known as the forgotten war," said St. Onge of why he became involved in the Legion.

He said kids are more receptive to hearing about the war these days than in the past. He believes the media coverage of the war in Afghanistan has played a role.

"Kids see on TV when someone dies, their body comes home. So kids know what's going on and ask more questions. In Korea, if you died, your body was buried there," he said.

St. Onge was one of 26,791 Canadians that fought in the Korean War. Five hundred and sixteen Canadian soldiers died and 378 are buried in Korea. The remaining 117 are buried in Canada and Japan.

Council tackles budget issues

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

Council has blown past its promotion budget by over $2,361.50. The realization they've gone far enough over was discussed at council after deciding to turn down a request totalling $1,050.

Council budgeted $4,000 for promotions for 2010 and to date has spent $4,837.50. In the last few months' council has dipped into a separate budget, the council's promotional budget, to cover costs of requests. But, having spent $2,476, that budget has almost dried out as well.

"Is $4,000 a realistic budget to set aside for these types of organizations?" questioned Coun. Lavar Adams after hearing how far over budget council has gotten.

Mayor Brian Wittal said in the past not as much money was spent in promotions.

"This last year with everything tighter we've seen a market increase (in requests)" he explained.

In 2008 council spent $4,780 and 2009, $5,322.50.

"Prior to (this year) the budget was bigger but we decided to cut back because we felt it's what the town at large should be paying," said Coun. Gayle Veno.

"We tried to get these organizations to let us know what they would need in advance ... that way when you get into the end of October you haven't spent over budget and then get a request for $1,000," she said.

The organization asking for funding was the Didsbury Minor Hockey Association. They were asking for the use of the multi purpose room at the Memorial Complex for three days.

"We thought it would make it a little easier for people to eat such, but they said they were at their limit and that's fine," said promotional co-ordinator for the association, Karen Rothenbusch after hearing the decision was denied.

"It's not a big deal, we thought we'd give it a shot so people have a little more room, but we've always made do before," she said.

Council agreed they want to look over the promotional budget and how they choose to dole out money. One suggestion most councillors seemed to agree with, was giving a lump sum to an organization such as the Didsbury Hockey Association, and letting them divvy the costs internally.

"We don't want to get in an argument because we gave it to the bantams, midgets and peewees but we didn't give it to the tiny tykes," said Wittal.

Council agreed they needed to look at options for keeping the promotional budget down and were expected to discuss this at the council retreat.

"This has always been something we've struggled with," said Wittal who said council's priority is supporting new groups.

"The intent is to give them a start to see if they can then be successful on their own or if they can then get support within the community from businesses or otherwise to keep it going," he said.

"A lot (of groups) over the years have been getting it continually and they expect and budget on that. And we're saying be very careful. Do not rely on that," he said.

Plans to bring green school to Didsbury on hold

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

The decision whether or not to base the first permaculture centre for the province in Didsbury is on hold, for another while longer.

Calgary-based engineer, Rob Avis of Verge Permaculture, looked at building a school either in Didsbury or Olds this time last year and was hoping to make a decision within the year.

The education centre would teach its students about permaculture, which among other things includes growing one's own food and building eco-friendly homes.

The design of the school is still in the planning stages but could include indoor classrooms and outdoor gardens that would help teach students ways to improve the world we live in.

"Didsbury has got a lot of good people who want to see the town progress. I think it's just a matter of finding the right partnership; I'm sure that will happen in time," said Avis of where the company is with planning.

Avis checked out a round straw-built house in the industrial area of town where he was hoping to build his ecological oasis. But because of its location in relation to an old landfill certain restrictions, such as not being able to cook, thwarted Avis from moving there.

Brittany Wickham, manager of planning and infrastructure for the town, said there are other areas in town they could use and they are looking into other options.

"Ideally they'd want a larger piece of land where they could accommodate small livestock as well because the whole mentality and oasis around permaculture is the fact that you can live off the land and use the land to its benefits," she said.

"Right now we're communicating back and forth with questions and bringing scope of their work into perspective so they can acquire financing and backing to start their facility," she said.

Since last year the company has relaunched and is reviving its content and mandate about what it wants to take hold of for its development. Avis also just came back from six months of teaching in Australia, all of which has put the development on hold.

"We're trying to move out of Calgary so we don't have the limitations we have in Calgary. Moving to a town like Didsbury - if it has different limitations or the same limitations, it's not going to be worth it. ... The town that can figure it out will get a lot of young people for sure," said Avis.

Business owners question necessity of commissioners

Olds Commissioners Don Graham and Ken McIvor head to Didsbury to speak with business owners.

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

A patrol company with its sights set on Didsbury is having a hard time getting started.

Olds Commissioners, a detachment of the Commissioners Southern Alberta Division wants to offer its services to businesses and town facilities as soon as possible.

For $2 a day the group promises to patrol near the business at random intervals between 9 p.m. and 5 a.m. the next day to make sure doors and windows are locked and no suspicious activity is going on in the area.

In order to cover the cost of the service, the group needs at least 50 businesses to sign up but not many business owners are inclined to do so.

"I think it's too much," said business owner Mark Missikewitz of Didsbury Dollar Store and More. "Two dollars a night doesn't sound like much but when you're looking at $60 a month for a drive-by once, when what are the chances of something happening," he said. Missikewitz said his store was broken into once four or five years ago but for the size of Didsbury and the amount of crime that occurs, he doesn't support the patrol.

And he's not alone. Other business owners feel the same.

"For them just to drive by at $2 a night, that's a little ridiculous," said Terry Stevenson, owner of Fountain Tire in Didsbury. "Citizens on Patrol does it and it costs $20 donation a year for them."

Don Graham, commissioner out pounding the pavement in Didsbury last week, said they're not the same as Citizens on Patrol, and aren't out to step on anyone's toes.

"We're not here to step on the COP, we're here to enhance their service," he said.

Some business owners agree.

"Extra security is never a bad idea as far as we're concerned," said Brad Blatz, co-owner of Didsbury Value Drug Mart. "We have a fairly extensive security system in the store and support COP as well but one more service, even just the appearance or the visual impact of it, doesn't hurt," he said.

"Since we've owned the store we haven't had any break-ins - just some vandalism and those kinds of things. So I mean, if it stops spray-painting or a smashed flowerpot every three months it pays for itself."

Keir Steele of Mountain View Liquor and Beer is also looking to register with the commissioners.

"Even just them driving by is a good thing. I'm from Olds so I can't do it myself," he said. "Kids in Didsbury have vandalized the area but thankfully nothing too major. Anything to help won't hurt," he said.

Graham and Ken McIvor will be collecting businesses for the next few weeks and are hopeful more businesses will sign on.

"We're quite a bit short right now," said Graham who said they have about a dozen confirmed businesses.

"Some stores the owner isn't in, or they want some time to think about it," said Graham, who's hoping to hear back soon.

The commissioners approached council in September offering its services to facilities in town at $2 per building a day. Administration suggested the cost to patrol five buildings at $3,650 a year was less expensive than the cost of paying an employee to respond to an alarm or call-outs.

Council agreed the commissioners would recruit businesses in an effort to keep costs down, and the town would add the cost of patrols to the utility bills of companies that request the service.

Hit-and-run case adjourned for now

BY DAN SINGLETON
For the Review

The Calgary man charged with first degree murder in the death of Olds College student Nicholas Baier in a hit-and-run outside the Texas Mickey bar made a brief appearance before Judge Mark Tyndale in Didsbury provincial court on Wednesday.

Handcuffed and wearing a blue jail-issued jumpsuit, Jeffrey Kevin Leinen starred at the floor and did not speak during the approximately two-minute appearance.

Calgary lawyer Andre Ouellette, who told the court he has been partially retained to act for the accused, asked the judge to adjourn the case until Nov. 22 so the Crown can provide disclosure documents to the defence.

Crown prosecutor Roy Smith told the judge that disclosure is still being prepared. He agreed to the adjournment, which was granted.

Leinen did not speak as he was taken from the courthouse by bailiffs following the court appearance, covering his face with his hands as he was placed in a police vehicle.

Speaking outside the courthouse following Leinen's appearance, lawyer Ouellette said he will be seeking the accused's release on bail.

"Certainly there will be an application for bail, in the same way that any other person charged with a serious offence," said Ouellette, who acted as Leinen's agent during Wednesday's court appearance. "My position is that absolutely an application will be made."

"People accused in very similar offences, and I'm thinking of the cement truck driver who was alleged and now convicted of killing a number of people, was released on bail. My position is he is entitled to be considered for release."

Ouellette said he has already spoken to Leinen about the night Nicholas Baier was killed. Leinen was out on parole the evening of the hit and run. He is accused of driving into a crowd about 12:20 a.m. Oct. 29.

In addition to the first-degree murder charge, Leinen has been charged with dangerous operation causing death, impaired operation of a motor vehicle causing death, dangerous operation causing bodily harm, and impaired operation of a motor vehicle causing bodily harm.

"I'm learning a little bit more about the case now and certainly the impression I'm getting is that we are not getting the full story at this stage about what happened in the bar," he said. "For example, I read allegations that my client was involved in beating up people inside the bar. The information I'm getting from different people is that my client was being beaten up inside the bar, and in fact there may have been a chokehold used against him by some of the door people. So things are never quite as simple they seem, I guess is the bottom line."

"What is he saying? I think he is still in shock to a large extent. My belief at this point is that he was severely beat up inside the bar. There may have been a chokehold used against him by removing him from the bar, so that goes a long way towards explaining what may have happened with the vehicle afterwards."

Leinen has injuries on his face and to one of his hands, he said.

"Part of that may be from what happened inside the bar and part of it may be from the accident with the vehicle," he said.

Ouellette says he is in discussions with Leinen about "whether I will become his counsel at this stage."

The defence has already started gathering statements from witnesses and other information, he said.

"I'm getting information from sources I'm sure will be reluctant to be as loud as some of the sources you've been talking to from the bar so far. I'm getting information from the Crown so he (Leinen) can decide what steps he wants to take."

Ouellette says Leinen is "getting lots of family support."

It is not yet known if Leinen will appear in person or by closed-circuit TV during his scheduled Nov. 22 court appearance.

MPs need to start leading drunk driving fight

DAN SINGLETON

With alcohol-related driving fatalities continuing to occur with frightening regularity across Alberta – including at least three in West Central Alberta in the past two weeks – there is a real danger that such carnage may actually be becoming commonplace and routine.

And make no mistake, the moment drunk driving becomes “just something people do,” no one is going to be safe travelling on any road or highway in this district or anywhere else in Alberta for that matter.

Alberta is already one of the worst provinces in Canada in terms of per capita impaired driving charges, with alcohol-related driving offences continuing an upward trend in each of the past three years.

Members of Mothers Against Drunk Driving have been leading the charge against impaired driving for years, spearheading awareness campaigns in a tireless effort to get across the simple message that drunk driving isn't worth it and that there are better choices that people need to start making.

Yet, sadly, such public awareness campaigns, for all their good intentions, have not led to even a marginal drop off in drunk driving incidents in Alberta. Try as they might, MADD members and their many partners continue to face an uphill battle against a widespread and all-too-common criminal activity that shows no sign of abating.

So what, if anything, can be done to turn the tide against the ongoing impaired driving carnage? Above all else, that's a question MPs need to start asking themselves.

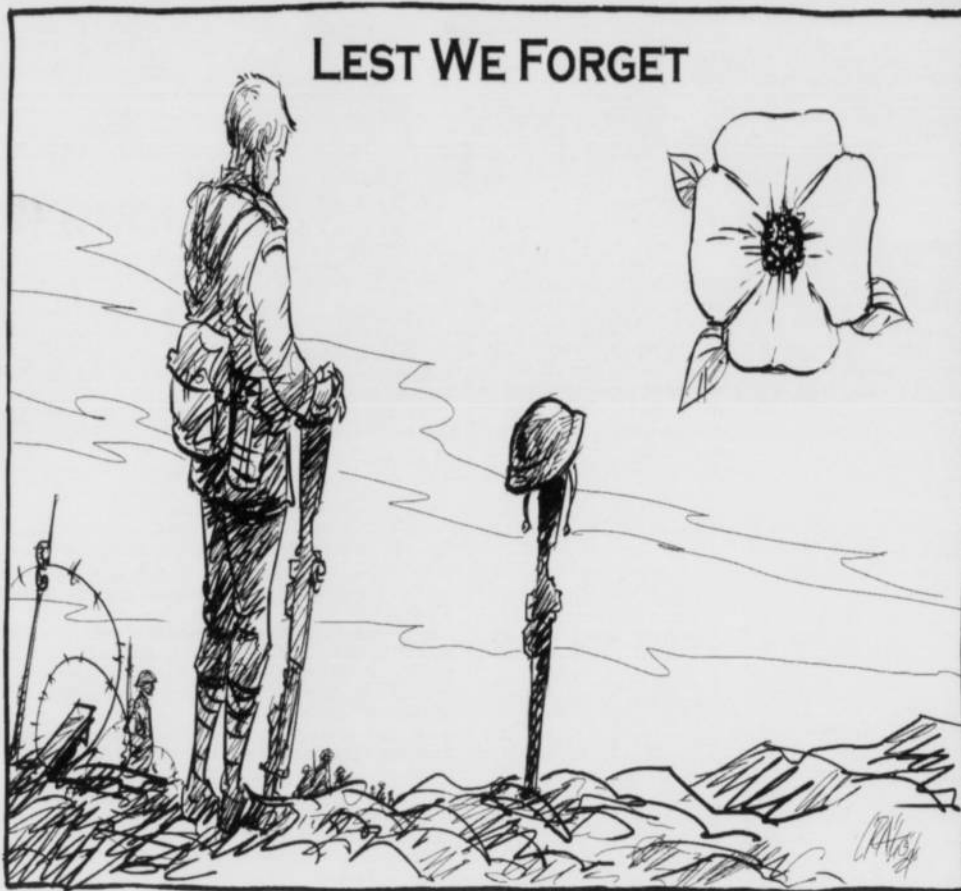

Even though MPs have the authority and the power to make meaningful changes to the drunk driving laws, far too little is being done. For example, one of the only changes to Canada's drunk driving laws in recent years has been an increase in the fine for first time convictions from $600 to $1,000.

Not only has that small change done nothing to deter drunks from getting behind the wheel – judging, of course, by the continued upward trend in offences – it makes a mockery of victims and their families.

What message is Parliament sending to drunk drivers by such slaps on the wrists? Does anyone actually believe that the risk of a $1,000 fine will keep drunks off the roads?

What is really needed, and needed now, are harsh new penalties – say, for example, two years in jail for first time convictions – aimed squarely at drunk criminal idiots who get behind the wheel and risk killing people in the process.

In recent days, families have again been holding funerals and burials for drunk driving victims in West Central Alberta. Is that a routine that will be allowed to continue?

Letters to the editor

The way I see it

The November 2, 2010 Didsbury Review carried an article on the front page – “Mill rate: Too high and unfair.”

Sixty-four residents living in Campus Condominiums, are quoted saying, “We use far less town infrastructure services.”

OK, let's look at infrastructure, roads and sidewalks for example. Does this mean that they don't drive on town roads or walk on town sidewalks, or maybe only once a month or once a week. I would be willing to bet they expect the roads and sidewalks to be maintained in a reasonable fashion for those occasions when they chose to use this particular infrastructure.

As far as services go, let's talk about garbage and compost. I have no doubt they use this service less than say a family of four. I know this because I am a senior living alone. Garbage pickup once a month is usually far more than adequate, and I don't use compost pickup all winter – but I still expect that service to be available when I need it. I don't know, but maybe that family of four would be more than happy to pick up the extra cost so you could get a tax break.

So why am I paying twice as much in taxes than the “64”?

The answer is simple. My house is assessed at twice the value of yours. Taxes are based on the assessed value – plain and simple. You pay for what you own, I pay for what I own.

Now if the town council is considering creating a special mill rate for 64 special people I am confident I can find another 64 special people willing to sign a petition for a special mill rate.

The bottom line is infrastructure and services cost money. Nobody likes paying taxes. If you believe taxes are too high, advocate for everyone. Let's not create special groups. In Didsbury I like to think we are all “special.”

If I have offended anyone I apologize but this is just the way I see it.

Judy Kaupp

Dignity insulted on a world stage

Omar Khadr is a Canadian terrorist and the shame of it has been radically amplified by the Harper government. The world media broadcast for almost five years that a Canadian is an international terrorist.

Mr. Harper let the message repeat over and over again on the world stage and would not put an end to the message by dealing with the matter. The Harper government refused to act like a serious government by taking responsibility for its citizen – including the responsibility to jail its own criminal. They also refused to acknowledge the issue of child soldiers and their radicalization.

They accepted the ongoing radicalization of a child while in a prison surrounded by the world's worse criminals. Not until pressured by the U.S. government did Canada, after five years, accept responsibility to incarcerate the prisoner.

All other Western countries accepted responsibility for their citizens. Our dignity and sovereign responsibilities as a nation was and continues to be insulted in front of the entire world.

Don't bank on quick ER cure

Anyone unfortunate enough to visit a hospital emergency room in the last few years probably is not surprised to hear dire warnings about the pending collapse of the system or to learn median wait times are approaching 20 hours at many urban hospitals in the Edmonton and Calgary regions. Despite recent media attention and political finger pointing, the system did not break overnight, which makes it all the more unlikely that a cure is on the immediate horizon.

Median wait times of 19.7 hours at the Sturgeon is a familiar story across the province where a lack of long-term care beds means patients, many of them seniors, are being shown acute care beds in the ER. These are local seniors who are forced to endure lying for hours, days and even weeks in emergency wards. Premier Ed Stelmach acknowledged the problem dating back to 2008, while local doctors broached the issues with top administrators several years ago yet little has changed. It's an unacceptable, shameful example of a collective failure in long-term and strategic planning on behalf of Alberta Health and Wellness and its health superboard.

The ER problems are symptomatic of a government with an untreated disconnect between political and administrative channels. This was most acutely felt when Ron Liepert held the health portfolio and appeared to butt heads with his handpicked health czar Stephen Duckett. The situation hasn't improved with the more diplomatic Gene Zwozdesky, as we saw with proposed bed closures at Alberta hospital that were later scrapped, and recent statements by Duckett that the problem isn't as bad as politicians and doctors suggest shows the government's vision does not necessarily fall in line with those at Alberta Health Services (AHS). The ER situation had been largely ignored until the public release of a letter from Paul Parks of the Alberta Medical Association to Zwozdesky that described a "potential catastrophic collapse" of emergency care in the province.

Zwozdesky's recent commitment to ensuring four-hour targets from triage to discharge for non-admitted patients and eight hours from triage to a bed hit all the right chords but in reality only raise eyebrows that change will actually come. This is, after all, a benchmark that was first proposed almost 20 months ago but can't and won't be met until at least December. The minister has promised to accelerate the opening of new beds, yet can't provide any specifics on staffing at many empty wards in busy Capital region and Calgary hospitals. AHS officials, meanwhile, suggest taking on the new beds will not be problematic.

As we've seen in Edmonton and Calgary, construction does not lead to decreased wait times if the beds and people to staff them aren't a priority. AHS has apparently told doctors that no more nurses will be hired at the Sturgeon, meaning status quo for patients who must continue waiting endlessly in crowded, albeit newer, conditions. Until Health and Wellness and AHS start to show some consistency that they're on the same page, Albertans have every right to be skeptical about a forthcoming cure. - taken from the St. Albert Gazette

Honouring the debt we owe

BRIAN LEE CROWLEY

Every Remembrance Day, Canadians rightly honour the sacrifice made by so many valiant compatriots over the years and decades past. Too often, however, we forget that remembrance of past deeds carries with it obligations to the present and for the future.

Primarily, we must care for our veterans and their families; that is, uphold the contract which exists between society and those who served in the past. We must also renew it with those who are serving today and will be asked to serve tomorrow.

Why do we falter in honouring our debt to our veterans? One reason is our lack of understanding of why the sacrifice of those who died, of those who were maimed in body or spirit or who simply risked so much in the service of their country, is so important, to us and to people a half a world away.

Let me pass on a story from a good friend who, as a child, was brought from Holland to live in Canada. It helps explain exactly what kind of men and women we sent overseas for past wars, have overseas today, and will need to send again.

Canadian troops liberated the Netherlands from Nazi occupation in World War II, a difficult job carried out with typical Canadian effectiveness and self-effacement, despite considerable losses fighting on flat, wet terrain that offered little shelter from enemy fire. Shortly after the liberation, my friend's Dutch father met a Canadian soldier and stopped him to say: "You don't know me and I don't know you, but I know who you are and what you represent. You and your fellow Canadians came from across the Atlantic, from far away, knowing nothing of my country and having little at stake here. At great expense in blood and treasure you have freed us from cruel oppression, and I imagine you have lost friends and colleagues in the effort. The least I can do is to tell you how deeply grateful my fellow-countrymen and I are for what you have done for us." The Canadian looked at him calmly, smiled and said, "No need to thank me sir. We had a job to do and we did it." Then he saluted and carried on down the road, while my friend's father went home and announced to his family, "I think we have found the country where we must go to live."

My friend is Peter Stoffer, now a distinguished member of the Canadian parliament and a keen advocate of the rights and honours due to veterans. And his story reminds me of Col. Pat Stogran, Canada's retiring Veterans Ombudsman. He, too, had a job to do and did it with quiet, dutiful determination. But it is a job we must all take upon ourselves.

Ask yourself this: Why was that Canadian soldier in Holland? It wasn't just to fight the enemy. He and his comrades were also there to defend the moral principles on which our society is based, values like individual freedom, democracy and the rule of law. He, and soldiers just like him, was prepared to put his life, his hopes, his dreams and his family's future on the line to uphold these principles, fighting for home, country and for a precious way of life.

They fought, and died, on behalf of all Canadians. When we, as citizens, ask our compatriots to take such risks, and make such sacrifices, we assume a debt of honour to all who serve, to those who return as well as those who do not. We must care for them and their families as needed.

I want to add my voice to Pat Stogran's in calling on Ottawa to fulfill our practical and even more important moral obligations to ensure that the treatment of our veterans is based on the highest Canadian standards of decency, generosity and fairness. While I trust that the moral obligation is clear, the practical one also matters; the world is not a safe place and if and when we ask such sacrifices from our brave men and women, it is imperative that we understand and keep the commitment that necessarily accompanies the request.

Safety and honour alike demand it, on November 11 and every day.

Dragons remain on top

BY SYLVIA COLE

Didsbury Dragons won top spot for south league championships for the second year in a row. Senior boys volleyball team continue their season's pattern of winning every game they've been up against.

"It's been a really good season for these guys," said coach Henry Paulgaard.

The Dragons hosted Chinook's Edge South Athletic Association senior boys volleyball leagues last Wednesday evening. Dragons slew Cremona Cougars in two quick games.

The team then waited and watched the close three games between Carstairs Kodiaks and Olds Koinonia Royals to determine whom they'd be going head to head with for first place.

Kodiaks beat out the Royals in the first match but the Royals came back in the second game with a win. Kodiaks revved up and blew the Royals out of the water in the final game, 15-9.

When Dragons and Kodiaks hit the court to compete against each other the Dragons were determined, earning four quick points before the Kodiaks battled back with two.

Noel West/Didsbury Review

Didsbury Dragons player Sawyer Topping spikes a ball against Hugh Sutherland Kodiaks player Zach Smith during the Senior Boys Volleyball Tournament in Didsbury, Nov. 3.

Kodiaks lagged behind eight points for most of the game but fought back and met the Dragons 24-24. Dragons got the final two points and won game one.

The second game was tight, the two teams staying within three points of one another for the full game. In the last few plays of the game, Dragons were sitting 24-22 when the Kodiaks hit the ball out. Dragons still managed to score their final point when they lobbed the ball over the net and two setters scrambled and fumbled at the net. Final score 25-23.

"We've played about three matches with these guys, and they're always really close games," said Paulgaard. Kodiaks placed second to the Dragons last year as well.

"We've played some good games against these guys, it's always a lot of fun," said Kodiaks coach Rob Scott.

Both teams will play in the West Regionals this Friday hosted in Didsbury.

Curling season gears up

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

Didsbury Curling Club members hope new fun nights will sweep people into the sport.

Last year members say fun night was tried but it only ended up happening a few times.

"This year we have some businesses sponsoring the nights and that way people can come and play for a subsidized cost," said curling club president, Amanda Gosselin. She said it's been tough to draw people to the sport, which seems to lose members every year.

"This isn't something specific to Didsbury, I think it's a problem in all rural areas," she explained.

"There isn't as much competition and just not as many people coming out to see what it's like."

Fun nights are hosted every second Friday, the next one occurring November 19. Each drop in is $5, and Gosselin said each one has a theme.

Last Friday's fun night had a clinic theme. "We are looking to mentor, and show people that this is a lifelong sport," she said.

Club manager Jennifer Bommarito said fun nights allow people to come out and try it without having to commit to a league.

"For people that don't have the time or don't know what it's like, these are the perfect opportunities," she said.

Currently Didsbury has a ladies', men's, mixed, junior and day league, each of which will host a bonspiel.

The first bonspiel will be November 27, the Grey Cup Bonspiel that the club has never tried before.

"Typically bonspiels take a full weekend. With the Grey Cup Bonspiel, it starts in the afternoon on Saturday and finishes before the Grey Cup starts so people can still get home to watch," said Bommarito. She said the bonspiel also isn't as structured and mixed teams only need one person of the opposite sex, instead of two and two.

"It makes it a lot easier to throw a team together and come out."

Freedom is by no means free

November 11 has always been poignant for me, but this year my observance of Remembrance Day will be all the more moving after I had a chance to visit the places where our Canadian soldiers fought and died in our defence through two world wars.

This summer, I took my family on a journey that I have long wanted to make, to tour the Canadian war monuments and the battlefields our soldiers fought on in Europe.

Every battlefield, trench or hill; every sprawling wartime cemetery; and every time I stood on the beaches of Normandy – the experiences of seeing first-hand the places where our brave soldiers fought, and all too often died, only expanded the great respect and appreciation I already had for our veterans.

It is a humbling thing to stand in the actual places where a titanic struggle between freedom and oppression was hard-fought and ultimately won by the forces of lib-

But freedom is by no means free. The Canadian soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice in those far-off lands, or who survived to become our present-day veterans, purchased it for us all at the cost of their pain and suffering and, for far too many, their very lives.

Today, many of the wartime trenches and tunnels have been covered over, and sheep graze quietly on their mounds.

At Vimy, a great monument soars above a rolling plain that was once a deadly battlefield. It's peaceful there now, but the vast cemeteries at Ypres and elsewhere testify to the cost at which Canada helped to purchase that peace.

Remembrance Day is our chance to honour the sacrifices of Canadian veterans and to appreciate the bravery of our men and women in the Canadian Forces who are still serving.

Our troops have always stood up for Canadian values and continue today to defend our way of life and our sovereignty.

They deserve our remembrance and our respect.

It was important to me that my teenage son Quinn experienced these places where Canadians fought, and for him to connect the sacrifices that were made there to the rights, security and freedoms that he as a Canadian enjoys to this very day.

On Remembrance Day, it is important that all Canadians connect in some way to the valour of our soldiers' sacrifices.

Blake Richards is the Wild Rose constituency Member of Parliament

Remembrance Day
NOVEMBER 11

It is important that on Thursday, November 11, we pause and give thanks to those who served our country in times of war and in peace. All Albertans, indeed all Canadians, owe a great debt to the young men and women who gave their lives in defence of something we in Canada so often take for granted—freedom.

For all Albertans, not just our veterans, Remembrance Day is a day to reflect on the importance of sacrifice, service to one's country and high cost that was paid to secure our free and democratic society.

Many people from across this country gave their lives during World War I and II, and the Korean War. It is important that we pay tribute to these brave and honourable individuals, as without their sacrifice Canada would not be the great place to live it is today.

It is equally important that on November 11, we acknowledge the brave men and women of the Canadian Forces who are currently serving their country by participating in peacekeeping operations around the world. I know all Albertans join with me in praying for your safe return to Canada.

On behalf of Premier Stelmach and my colleagues at the Alberta Legislature, I would like to salute those who risked and are risking their lives for us.

Police briefs

BY SYLVIA COLE

Man dies in tragic accident

A 23-year-old local man died Saturday afternoon from what police are calling an extremely tragic accident.

The man, working underneath a Bobcat Skid-Steer Loader just west of the Bergen Road Store was crushed when the Bobcat fell on top of him.

A friend found him around 1 p.m. and called for help. Didsbury and Sundre RCMP attended the scene as did Sundre Fire Department, EMS and victim services. Efforts to revive him were unsuccessful.

At the request of family, RCMP are withholding his name.

Truck windows smashed

A grey Ford F350 company truck was parked on the 1700 block of 20th Avenue last week in Didsbury. Sometime between 10 p.m. October 30 and 8 a.m. October 31 the driver and passenger windows in the front were smashed out.

Halloween calm night

Police received four calls from 6 p.m. October 31 until 8 a.m. the next morning. Two calls were concerned about a vehicle speeding around town because of kids being out walking. Plate number was reported and police dealt with the driver by way of stern warning. Police also received a noise complaint from a house party in Didsbury at 11:30 p.m.

Normalcy returning to college in wake of death

BY LEA SMALDON
Review Staff

The flags at Olds College campus, lowered when Nicholas Baier died Oct. 29 in a hit and run, were ceremoniously raised to full mast Friday.

Cattle from the nearby auction mart bawled in the distance as Baier's three roommates and his best friend hoisted the Alberta and Canada flags back to the top of two poles on campus.

"How appropriate is that to further celebrate Nicholas Baier?" said Jordan Cleland, Olds College vice-president of advancement, noting the familiar agriculture related sound as he addressed the crowd gathered at noon, in front of the Ralph Klein Centre at the Community Learning Campus.

Baier was a second year agriculture management student readying himself at the Olds post-secondary institution to return home to Altario, Alta. to help run the family farm.

After a short introduction by Cleland, roommates Tyler Withrow, Ken Morey, and Brandon Lemay and Baier's good friend Connor Layton hoisted the flags while a group of fellow students and college staff watched including several witnesses and hit-and-run victims that survived the crash.

Layton, an agriculture management student who met Baier while attending college, said the ceremonial flag raising may have given him some closure.

"I don't know what to say here. It's something I don't care to have to do again. Nick was a good person and I'll miss him," said Layton.

Baier was one of several people struck by a vehicle as they were standing on the sidewalk outside the Texas Mickey Bar early in the morning on Oct. 29.

Baier died from his injuries while three others sustained minor injuries.

A Calgary man is charged with first-degree murder and faces several other criminal charges related to the crash.

Cleland told those gathered for the flag raising that as time has passed, he has noticed a change in spirits, specifically mentioning seeing a few more smiles on campus.

"The hurting isn't necessarily going to stop," Cleland said. "But it's time for these flags to go back to full mast."

The ceremonial flag raising culminated a week of continued availability of counselling services, a candlelight vigil held in Baier's honour, and Baier's memorial service held in his hometown Thursday.

College classes resumed last Tuesday and exams cancelled in the days following Baier's death went ahead last week.

"The faculty is close enough to the students to know their frame of mind. They're wanting to get a sense of normalcy," said Cleland.

Over 200 people, including college staff and faculty, students, RCMP, and Victim's Services attended a private outdoor candlelight vigil for Baier on the college campus last Tuesday night.

"It wasn't about speeches. We were here to remember Nicholas Baier and pull together as a community," said Cleland. "It was a lot of silent reflection."

Olds RCMP Cpl. Troy Byrt attended the vigil along with several fellow officers to reach out to the college staff and students in a show of support.

"And to be quite honest, I understand what they're going through. I mean we've been through that kind of the same type of situation, different dynamics, where we've lost one of our own, or multiples, like Mayerthorpe and stuff like that. So I have some understanding of the feelings and kind of what they're going through," said the RCMP officer.

Byrt said this was the first vigil he has attended and he wasn't sure what to expect.

"I thought it was done very tastefully," Byrt said. "I thought it was a very nice act, a very nice gesture towards Nicholas."

stood as a focal point and after the half-hour vigil was done, attendees laid their candles around the table.

A donation jar also sat on the table for the newly emerging Nicholas Baier Memorial Fund.

"What we decided to do was start a very generic fund and two or three months down the road when things are less fresh for the family, discuss what to do with it," Cleland said.

Possibilities could include establishing something at the college or giving the money to an appropriate organization like Mother's Against Drunk Driving.

About 75 Olds College staff and students were bused to Baier's memorial service, held last Thursday in Altario's community hall approximately four hours east of Olds near the Alberta/Saskatchewan border. The use of the Didsbury Community Bus was donated for the occasion, said an appreciative Cleland.

Layton also attended the memorial in Baier's hometown and learned more about his friend of a year and a half.

"There was a fair bit I didn't know about him. It was nice to be there," Layton said.

As for resuming some normalcy in his life in the aftermath of Baier's death, Layton had this to say: "It definitely won't be normal as it was before, but life goes on."

Didsbury's Chelsea Overwater is overcoming hurdles while impressing SAIT Trojans Volleyball coach and teammates.

Overwater, second year rehabilitation therapy assistant student, recently switched schools and sports, setting foot on the volleyball court last weekend for the first time in two years.

"Chelsea took a year off from volleyball, she didn't play club, and even when she played, it was in a smaller town where she wasn't exposed to the level of volleyball that some of these other athletes were," said Dian Bulger, Trojans' head coach. "But Chelsea definitely has a lot of potential. And she has the biggest learning curve out of anyone on our team. The fact that she played (Saturday) alone is a huge accomplishment."

Overwater led Didsbury Dragons field hockey team to a national runner-up finish as the squad's captain and MVP over two years ago and was offered a scholarship to Missouri State.

She spent last year playing field hockey with the Missouri State University Bears but decided in the end to come home.

"Basically, I got really homesick ... it was just too far away," she said. In Overwater's rookie year at Missouri State she dislocated her kneecap and tore her meniscus at the end of October so didn't play at the end of the winter season.

"Once I decided I wasn't going back to Missouri State, I e-mailed Diane, and she got me to come in and play in March. When I came to play on spring break, I rolled my ankle ... and ended up on crutches," she said.

Despite past injuries, Overwater has taken on the new sport with vigour and currently her stats line reads one set played with one kill as she competes for court time with fellow middles Christine Issel and Grier Moffet.

"She's an athlete and a fighter," said Bulger. "And every time you tell her something, she immediately absorbs it. There's not a lot of athletes who can do that."

110. In Memoriam 110. In Memoriam

In loving memory of Phyllis Campbell who passed away November 7, 2009.

There will always be this heartache and often the silent tears,

We shall cherish those precious memories of the days when you were here.

We hold you close within our hearts,

And there you will remain,

Please walk with us throughout our lives,

Until we meet again.

Remembering you is easy, we do it every day, But missing you is a heartache that never goes away.

Always remembered and sadly missed by your children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great grandchildren.

180. Thank You 180. Thank You

The Green Bamboo

Thank you to all our friends & customers for supporting us for the past 7 1/2 years. With everything being in such a short notice, we didn't have a chance to say goodbye. So we wanted to let you know that we have sold the business to Maggie & Ken. They come with great experience & we feel we left the business in good hands.

We will miss you!
